American odds are based around $100, but how they relate to $100 varies depending on whether the bet is favored or not.

A $10 bet with -200 odds would give you $5 plus your original $10 bet back.

A $100 bet would win $280, in addition to the original $100 bet.

Fractional odds
For example, it's fairly common to see American odds of -115, but that converts to 20-23 in fractional odds.

If you think the likelihood is higher than that, it is a good bet.

If you are given odds better than one-in-two, it's a good bet.

Typically you won't know the exact odds because sporting events aren't that predictable, but this is a key principle to keep in mind when evaluating a bet, especially on a moneyline.

That percentage can be compared to moneyline odds, once you convert the odds to
